

ALOKI DOSHI

Aloki Doshi holds a Masters degree in Clinical Research from Manipal University and a Diploma in Forensic Science and Criminology from St. Xavier's College, Mumbai. Aloki completed her course by interning with the oncology dept at the Prince Aly Khan Hospital, Mumbai. During the course of her forensic training, she was attached with a south Mumbai police station during which she was able to interact with serving police officers in various technical departments, besides crime and investigation. This experience drove her desire to contribute her knowledge back to community. She has been a forensic educator, trainer and researcher with FACTS for over 13 years now, with a vision to create awareness in the minds of young scientists and train them in specialized protocols for forensic examination of evidence. She has coupled her research skills with her interest in pedagogy to help develop forensic training programs in Mumbai undergraduate colleges, both in science and law. She has teaches various topics of the forensic paper to LLM students in Law Colleges. Her engaging personality and forensic knowledge have contributed significantly to the FACTS corporate trainings in the banking sector, and in HR based programs with clients like Accord India and DCB bank. She has been an integral part of the Mumbai police FACTS training team, giving a lecture and providing live demonstrations in crime scene processing and the preservation of vital forensic evidence. She has assisted the FACTS consultancy team in the trial proceedings of a hit and run case, working closely with senior advocates in the Mumbai Sessions Court. Aloki enjoys her work and blends her forensic skills and people skills to create child-friendly interactive forensic camps for the young, while also enjoying reading, sketching and travel in her spare time.
